Port of NEWHAVEN VHF Ch.12 by Alexis Maryon

Alexis puts together a lovely collection of black and white images of the Port of Newhaven on the south coast of England, a place he is drawn to and often returns to document. Only 120 copies, it's beautifully printed and the wide sizing gives you a cinematic experience.

Among the things he mentioned that draws him is the intensity of the light and the contrasty monochrome reflects this beautifully. Again, very well printed and the matte finish suits the grunge feel nicely.

You are transported to small port town life full of interesting characters and he balances urban landscape with street photography well due to some solid composition and sequencing.
